MOOD INTENTIONS

ARE POOR · ASSETS to leave to your family. Many-men intend to protect their Roved ones by assurance, but never "even try to turn their intention into petion. Many others do try, but not until too late. For example : during 1898 alone the Equitable declined the applications of 8,382 persons for £6,316,000 of assurance. At Addeley, Southend, on the 19th June, KATE, the dearly beloved wife of ALFRED R. BOWMAN, of

Hongkong, June 27th, 1899; TROUBLES are raining thickly upon China at present. Within the space of a few days we have had to record an anti-missionary riot in the Fokien province, the murder of two Russian engineers and ten Cossacks at Kirin in Manchuria, the abduction of a German engineer and two surveyors at Kiaochau, and an attack upon the French Consulate and the Imperial Maritime Customs establishment at Mengtzu, Yunnan. With regard to the anti-missionary outbreak at Kienyang and Kienning, fortunately there was no loss of foreign life, and as Great Britain seems bent upon playing the part of the benevolent friend towards China as is settlement, makes the total area of the Cosmoclearly indicated by the proposed retrocession of Shanichun, there will probably be little difficulty in arranging a settlement with regard to the loss of property. In the other cases, however, China will have to deal respectively with Russia, Germeny, and France, none of whom will be likely to prove very complacent. The outrage by brigands at Kirin will give Russia an excuse for rendering her control of-Manchuria more effective. Germany has put up with outgage or insult in Shantung, and the abduction of her railway officers will be followed by swift and effective punishment, as in the case of the recent outrage near Jichao. As to France, the attack on the Consulate at Mengtzu will doubt be made the occasion for further large demands in Yunnan, Particulars as to the origin of the Mengtzn affair have not yet come to hand, but it has followed closely upon the visit of M. Doumer, the Spinney was with her husband. Governor-General of Indo-China, in whose suite was a staff of railway surveyors who were to remain in the province to complete the survey for the line to Yunnan-sen, and it is possibly opposition to this project that has brought about the anti-foreign riot at Mengtzu. But whatever the cause, the attack on the French Consulate will BEFORE HIS HONOUR W. MEIGH GOODhave to be atoned for, and probably very heavily. Heavy demands, it may be remembered, were put forward recently in Szechuen for satisfaction in respect of province falling within the British sphere of influence territorial compensation could not sums at the time you were managing partner of the brain, and he would add that the evi- history of the last hat century. Nature not conveniently be enforced. In Yunnan the conditions are not quite the same and if

part of any foreign Power. The danger of the situation is increased by the fact that China is at present somefor a territorial concession in Chekiang through abject fear of the Celestial hosts. Great people of other provinces, when they hear of the affair, will share that impression; There is some reason to fear, therefore, that anti-foreign outrages may increase and also that the Peking Government may be ledinto resisting the claims for compensation for those that have already occurred and the others that are pretty sure to follow. In that case force would have to be applied and the carving up of China would commence in earnest. The situation being thus charged with danger, what should be the attitude of Great Britain? A correspondent whose letter appears in another column takes us to task for having said in a recent article that "the Chinese "Government, unable or unwilling to main-"tain order and fulfil its international ob-"ligations, must be assisted by foreign con-"trol both at Peking and in the provinces;" and for having expressed the hope that Her Majesty's Government would not hesitate to undertake the task of reforming the native administration. Our correspondent favours the policy of spheres of influence, which he contends will settle the China question naturally. There can be no doubt as to the growth of spheres of influence in China, nor is the circumstance one that should occasion regret, but in allocating and demarcating the spheres we claim that the Chinese capital, whether it remain at Peking or be transferred to some other city, BY US are acknowledged by the lead-Islauld be recognised as falling within the makers to be equal to British sphere, and that Great Britain's duty to herself, to China, and to humanity renders it incumbent upon her to under take the work of reforming the native administration. In carrying out this beneficent work she would naturally use al! available native means and lead rather than on the water as prepared and used by drive, in so far as leading might be found possible, but whether by leading or driving the work of reformation should be vigorously carried on. As to what the other Powers might say, that is not a consideration that should be allowed to count for very much. The best way would be to proceed on the old and well tried plan and "let them say on." The other Powers already possessed of spheres of influence might find enough to occupy their attention there, and those not possessed of spheres would have no right to interfere.

In the first coun the five prisoners were charged with robbery with arms and in the second count nothing was said about whether they had arms or not, but they were charged with committing this robbery Complainant was the keeper of a temple calle the Han On Temple outside the west gate of the walled city of Kowloon. At about half-past one on the morning of the 15th May the side door of the temple was broken open and those men entered. Complainant was then standing at the entrance of his room, and he was seized by these men and pressed downwards upon the ground, and at the same time he was threatened with knives. Then his hands were tied behind his back with a piece of rope, and there was also a piece of thorn tied over his mouth. Two of the men guarded him, one having his foot on his head and the other on his back. While these two were keeping gnard over the temple-keeper the others burst open two boxes belonging to complainant and took certain things out of a box. It would appear that there was no light in this room at first, but the robbers lighted torches when they came in. Complainant would tell the jury he was not able to recognise any of the robbers. Of course that was only natural, because according to his account of the transaction he was kept pressed down on the floor, with his face downwards, but he thought they would find that one of the
